The company was a sponsor of the event, while The Club at Las Campanas and Santa Fe Concorso organizing committee enlisted Post to air the show for the second year in a row.

On the program, Post interviewed a host of notable figures including racecar legend Denise McCluggage, who was the subject of a special tribute during the Concorso for her contributions to racecar driving and automotive journalism; Beverly Little, Co-Founder of the Santa Fe Concorso; Steve Harris, a member of the Concorso Advisory Committee; Sotheby's International Realty brokerage manager Gregg Antonsen; Terry Box, an automotive writer with The Dallas Morning News; Ron Blessey, broker/owner of Home Buyers Mortgage; and David Loan, General Manager and COO of the Club at Las Campanas. A film crew from the History Channel, which was on site to shoot footage for an upcoming broadcast on significant and unique automotive events around the country, interviewed several of Post's guests on camera after the radio show ended.

Sotheby's International Realty's entryway booth at the Santa Fe Concorso allowed sales associates from the company to introduce its services to the more than 2,000 guests who were expected to have attended. Santa Fe agents Lois Sury, Johnnie Gillespie, Tim Galvin, Paula Berthelot, Stephanie Yoder and Chris Webster had the opportunity to discuss real estate with automobile enthusiasts, particularly focusing on the company's expertise in the premier golf and equestrian community of Las Campanas.

"Sotheby's International Realty, Inc., is thrilled to support the Santa Fe Concorso, which is fast becoming one of Santa Fe's premier end-of-summer events," said Gregg Antonsen, manager of Sotheby's International Realty's Santa Fe brokerages. "We are proud of the role we have played during the past two years in bringing national attention to the Concorso through our sponsorship and Rey Post's live broadcast coverage of this significant event."
